Learn Luxembourgish

 Posted on March 12, 2015 (<https://www.angloinfo.com/blogs/luxembourg/lux-live/learn-luxembourgish/>) by timea.gorcea (<https://www.angloinfo.com/blogs/luxembourg/lux-live/author/timea-gorcea/>)

(<http://learnluxembourgish.com>) Liz Wenger, author, teacher, Luxembourger in Canada, has just published the first English book to teach yourself Luxembourgish.

The book is aimed at adults who speak English as their mother language and as their second or third language, and who want to start learning Luxembourgish without necessarily having to go to a class. If they already attend a class, the book provides valuable additional practice and explanations.

It is one of the most comprehensive English guide to the Luxembourgish language on the market.

The book includes audio, was written by Liz Wenger, founder of learnluxembourgish.com (<http://learnluxembourgish.com/>), and proofread by Jackie Messerich (founder Moien Asbl (<http://www.moienasbl.lu>)).

The book is available online for 34.99€ from learnluxembourgish.com (<http://learnluxembourgish.com/>), or for the reduced price of 30€ during book signing events in March.

About the Blog

Being a foreigner in Luxembourg can be quite tricky especially when the local population so easily jumps from Luxembourgish to German or French in a matter of seconds. And although almost everyone in the country speaks English at various levels, most of your news will be in Almost everyone in the country speaks English at various levels, most of you here will be in one or more of the three national languages.

This blog is prepared to provide you the latest local news, what's happening in the city and the country, but also in the neighbouring regions, only a few miles away. It is the natural complement to the invaluable Information pages and to the directory of English-speaking language businesses and associations in and around Luxembourg.

Though the goal is to present everything in English, some of the websites referred to might be either in French or German. Look at it as your daily foreign language lesson and don't hesitate to ask if there is anything that needs clarification!
