How to speak Luxembourgish

It's not always easy learning Luxembourgish, but a TV newsman in Chicago has given it his best go.

The segment was broadcast after an article was published on 18 January in America's largest financial newspaper on Brits taking Luxembourg nationality \(https://www.wsj.com/articles/before-eating-schnuddelhong-with-gromperekichelcher-you-must-pass-the-sproochentest-1516289300\) in advance of Brexit \(http://delano.lu/d/category/brexit/49540\).

On Tuesday, Larry Potash \(https://twitter.com/LarryPotash\), a presenter on "WGN Morning News", told viewers \(https://www.facebook.com/LarryPotash/videos/10155477358193406/\):

"The UK left the European Union, which means British people living in Luxembourg have to learn the local language and pass a test. And if you know anything about Luxembourg's language, and you probably don't, it's really, really weird. It's called Luxembourgish. It's a mix of French and German. And the Wall Street Journal reports if you're taking the language test, you need to know things like, the name of a pancake is Gromperekichelcher.”

(Potato pancake would be a more accurate translation.)

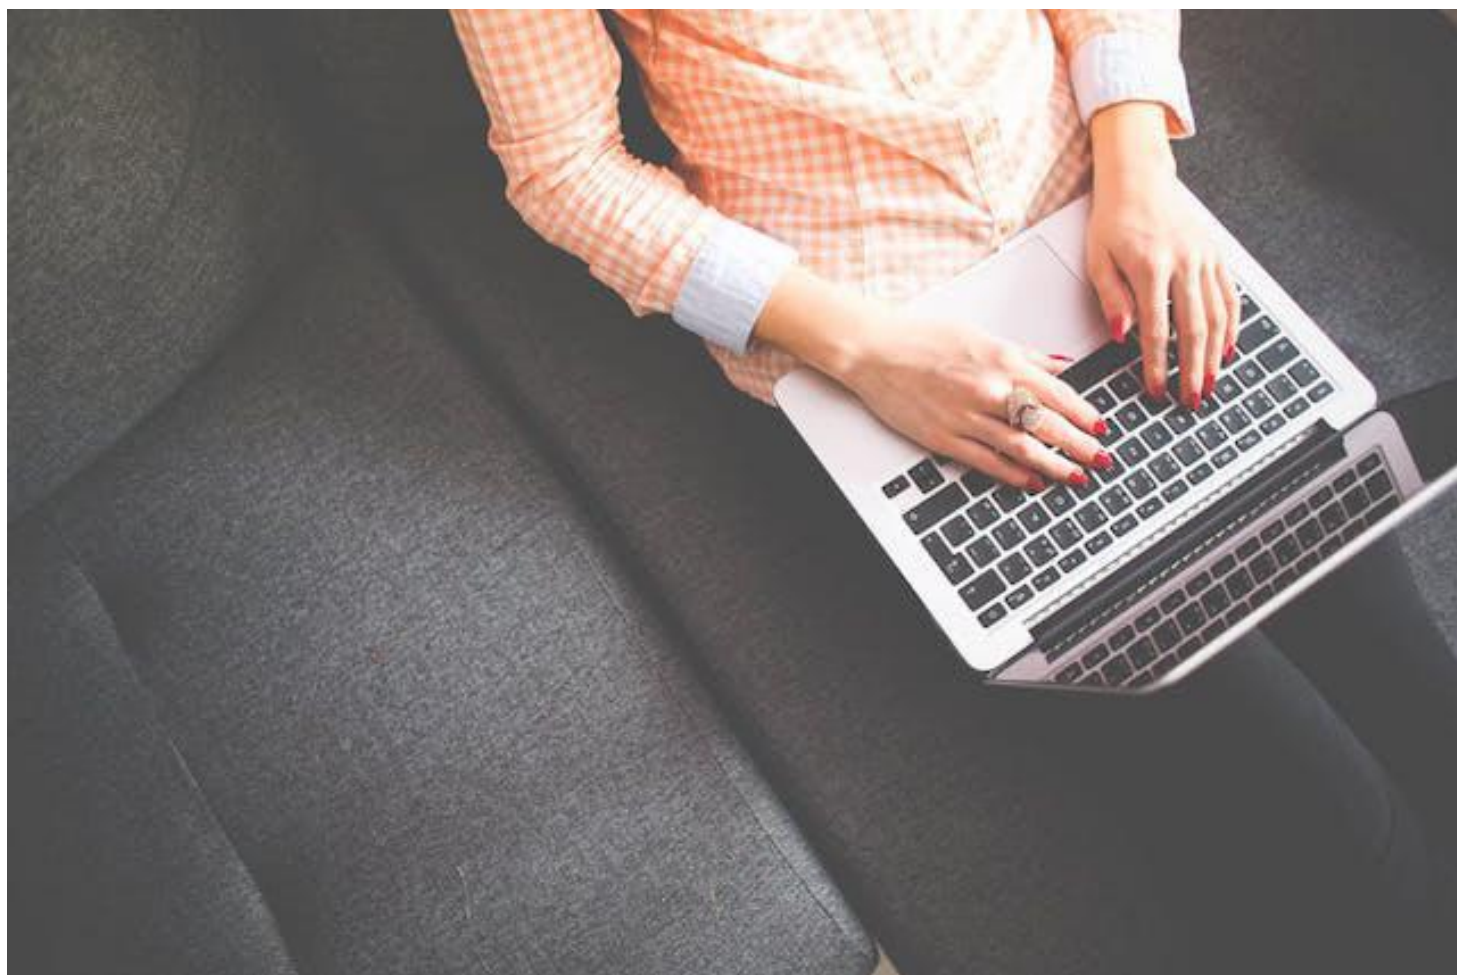

Later in the segment, Potash stated:

“When I contacted Liz Wenger at LearnLuxembourgish.com for help with this story, she asked if I could mention her website. And of course, I said ‘yes’. And she said, ‘Larry, dat ass fantastesch’. And I said, ‘why, yes, Liz, you are so right. That is fantastic.’ Which is what that means.”

According to a press release issued by the station in November \(http://wgntv.com/2017/11/27/wgn-tv-november-ratings-wgn-news-shows-tremendous-growth-in-morning-evening-and-late-news-increased-to-the-2-news-at-4pm-and-5pm/\), “WGN Morning News” is the top rated breakfast news programme among adults in Chicago.
